

Moment 5: Present resistance

Welcome to the fifth and last moment of this tour: Present resistance.

Since 2010 to the present, Memorial House José Domingo Cañas is a site of memory which focuses its work on the education, promotion and defence of human rights and on the observation of human rights by monitoring the actions of the State during social protests, generating evidence and being a present in the application of public policies and the generation of reports before national and international human rights organizations.

These objectives guide the work of the site commissions, composed by volunteers: The Education Commission, the Observer Commission, and the Observers of Human Rights Commission.

The permanent work at the Memorial House José Domingo Cañas is focused on the search for truth, justice, integral reparation and guarantees of non-recurrence.

We invite you to follow us on our social media which you may find in the QR codes in the entrance and within the site.

If you have any doubts, please reach out to any member of the Memorial house team for assistance.
